Introduction

Get a running start in the high-stakes world of financial investment! This first course is designed to help you become an informed investor by providing you with the essential concepts for long-term success in managing money. You'll start by learning the role of financial markets and financial assets in a well-functioning economy. From there, you'll learn about the wide range of financial instruments available in major asset classes, their features and valuations. You'll explore how financial markets actually operate in the real world, focusing on how and where securities are traded and how various market types differ from one another in practice. You will also learn the basics of algorithmic trading, dark pools, buying on margin and short selling.

This course examines the key concepts of financial markets and instruments as well as their operation. The course also discusses the analytical techniques and practical tools to use each instrument for economic management. Topics covered include the roles and determinants of interest rates, fixed income securities markets, equity markets, foreign exchange markets, and option markets.

By the end of the course, learners will be able to:

- List and distinguish the different financial instruments available to an investor
- Compare global financial markets
- Explain the features of equity, debt, and derivative instruments
- Define traditional and alternative asset classes
- Discuss different trading venues and mechanics of securities trading
- Discuss the current trends affecting today's financial markets

Eligibility: Students from Commerce stream, and pursuing undergraduate course

Total Hours 35

This course is designed to be accessible for students of all knowledge levels and gives you the actionable foundation needed to manage money in a post-crisis world.

Module 1: (7 HOURS) Introduction & Review of Elementary Finance Tools

This module introduces the Investment and Portfolio Management Specialization, which is made up of four courses. This module discusses how the first course, Global Financial Markets and Assets, is organized. It outlines the different stages of the investment management process, which guides the focus of the Specialization. It also reviews basic finance concepts and tools such as time value of money, computing returns, discounting and compounding.

Topics covered include:

Familiarize with the organization of the class

Meet the professor and your peers

Explain the investment management process

Review elementary concepts in finance

Compute present value or future value of a single cash flow

Compute present value of future value of a stream of cash flows

Define an annuity or perpetuity

Apply time value of money tools to solve basic mortgage, loan or retirement problems

Module 2: (8 HOURS) Financial system & financial assets: fixed income securities

In this and the next two modules, we cover the key institutional features of financial markets and instruments. We ask the following questions: Why do financial markets exist? What role do they play? What are financial assets and how are they different than real assets? How does it all come together? Basically, this is where I hope you will get to see the big picture of the entire financial system and how it comes together.

Module 2 focuses on fixed income securities. We'll get started with a review of basics of bond valuation. You will learn about short-term money market instruments, U.S. Treasury securities as well as corporate bonds. After module 2, you will be able to describe fixed income securities, be familiar with their institutional features, and identify their cash flows. Finally, you will learn how to value fixed income securities such as Treasury bills, zero-coupon or coupon-bonds and compute yields.

Topics covered include:

- Explain the roles of financial markets
- Distinguish between real and financial assets
- Define and explain money market instruments, zero-coupon and coupon-bonds and features
- Identify the cash flows associated with fixed-income securities
- Define and explain bond market features
